

2012 Jules Taylor, Grüner Veltliner
Marlborough, New Zealand

“I was asked to present a flight of New Zealand and Austrian Grüners at an aromatic symposium in Nelson (South Island of NZ), earlier this year, to a gathering of the world’s wine media. I accepted this invitation but halfway through the task in hand I almost wanted to bottle out. The Kiwi offerings were dire, suffering from being made from young vines and also showing a distinct lack of practice...

“I wish Jules Taylor’s wine had been in the lineup. It is the finest non-Austrian GV I have tasted to date. She is an exceptional talent and if this wine was in an Austrian line up, it would have indeed scored highly. That’s serious praise from an international Grüner skeptic. It’s also great value. Get in quick because stock is understandably very limited.”

Matthew Jukes
Moneyweek
September 13, 2013

